

Tile and ceramic industries

Bentonite is a fine-particle clay that is often used as a suspension agent in glazes. Iron below one percent and light color during cooking using Bentonite in Ceramic industry

Bentonite is colloidal, it is typically finer than ball clay, can have huge surface area and active electrolytic which gives extremely high plasticity. In fact, bentonite can produce ace dry strength without much effect on fired color.